CHIEF EMMONS IS SUSPENDED

Burgess Terminates Relations with Officer. Latter Claims Council is with him. Petty Arguments Mark Contention.

Matters between Burgess Raymond and Chief of Police Emmons came to a crisis late this morning when the officer was put under suspension by the town's chief executive, the order to remain in effect until the monthly meeting of Council on June second.
The suspension is the outcome of difficulties which have existed since the Burgess took office in January but was precipitated by two recent acts of the officer with which Mr.
Raymond found fault.

The first of these occurred on Thursday morning when Mr. Emmons painted a white line on the pavement at the Western Maryland Railway station to show the limit at which hackmen could stand in the solicitation of business. This morning complaint was received from one of the hotels about the treatment of a porter who stepped over the line to receive a bag of which a salesman wished to be relieved.

The Burgess called the attention of Chief Emmons to the affair and asked whence his authority to paint the line at all. When told that the order came from Calvin Gilbert, chairman of the highway committee of council,
Mr. Raymond objected, saying that such orders should come from the burgess, that it was to him and not to the various councilmen that the police were subject.

The second cause of difficulty grew out of an advertising scheme of a half dozen college students who visited town about half past one o'clock Thursday afternoon with a cornet, a drum and other instruments to advertise
the base ball game with Bucknell at four o'clock. They were stopped by Chief Emmons who threatened to arrest them as a nuisance under the noise ordinance of the borough.
Mr. Raymond appeared on the scene at the time and told the college boys to go ahead, that he would give them permission to continue with their parade.

The officer told them that, if they kept on, he would arrest them unless the burgess gave a written permit, even though he had heard the executive give verbal permission. In explanation of this attitude Mr. Emmons said this morning that he wanted evidence "in black and white" in case there was trouble over the matter.

When Burgess Raymond handed Officer Emmons the suspension papers
he demanded that he surrender his badge and mace. The officer refused to comply with the order, saying that neither was borough property, that he had received the badge from Charles Kappes, the original owner, and that he himself had purchased the mace and that it was his own property.

A rather intense scene accompanied the suspension of the officer during which personalities were much in evidence.

During the period Mr. Emmons is off duty Park Noel, a former member of the police force will act as chief and day officer.

It will be recalled that a special committee of council recently investigated the difficulties between the Burgess and the Chief of Police but they reported that the trouble was not of sufficient importance to warrant action.

Mr. Emmons stated this afternoon that he intended to remain on duty, in spite of his suspension as he claims to have been promised the support of the majority of the town council.

TOOK HIKE

Walked to New Oxford in Two Hours and a Half.

C. W. Baker and R. C. Gurnes of College returned to town this morning by train after having hiked to New Oxford Thursday evening. They left town at nine o'clock at night and reached their destination at half past eleven. Both report the roads in good
"walking" condition.

ANOTHER WRECK ON THE MOUNTAIN

Western Maryland Cars Derailed.
One Trainman Hurt. Mail and Express Miss Entirely. Cause of Wreck not Known.

Eight cars were derailed, one man hurt, traffic delayed and all mail and express hours late through a wreck which occurred shortly before midnight at a point about three quarters of a mile this side of Jack's Mountain tunnel.

The train, the regular through freight from Hagerstown to York, was coming down the mountain at its usual speed when the last seven cars, with the caboose, jumped the track and rolled over. With the derailed cars went John Sarbaugh, of Hagerstown, a brakeman, who received severe bruises on the back and side. It is not known just how seriously he was injured.
No cause is given for the wreck.

For some distance the track was torn up and wrecking crews were summoned from Hagerstown and Hanover. Work in the darkness was difficult and it was not until about ten o'clock this morning that the line was open for travel.

A relief train was sent up to take passengers for the train due here at 8:46. It consisted of a combination car and one coach. No mail or express was transferred and as a result business houses were much handicapped in their day's work. The morning papers and all the other things which are relied upon to compose the daily routine of local people were missing and were held to be brought down on the regular train which did not get to Gettysburg until about 11 o'clock.

TO MARK PLACES OF HEROIC DEEDS

Veterans will Show where they Scratched up Breastworks with their Fingers. Columbia Club Expected to have Usual Fireworks.

To mark spots where various members of their command displayed unusual courage during the battle, Corporal John L. Smith and others of the Columbia Club, Philadelphia, will come to Gettysburg on Saturday.

One of these is a ditch which Corporal Smith and members of his company dug with their bayonets and finger-nails for protection against Confederate sharpshooters and from which position a galling fire was poured into the ranks of the rebels causing the failure of a brilliant charge.

Six of the men were in the Corn Exchange Regiment at the time of the battle, though many others compose the Columbia Club which will bring with its this year's tour a party of seventy prominent bankers, manufacturers, merchants and business men of Philadelphia.

Three private cars, two sleepers and a diner, have been chartered for the trip and will be attached to one of the regular trains on the Reading Railroad.

The party has made reservations at the Eagle Hotel and will stay until Sunday evening. It is expected that they will follow their custom of other years and have a display of fireworks in front of the hotel Saturday evening.

LOCAL SCOUTS TO REORGANIZE

Will Dr. II Preparatory to Participating in Memorial Day Parade. Expect to have Usual Summer Camp. Meeting on Monday.

At a meeting of the Gettysburg Boy Scouts on Thursday evening it was decided to reorganize for the summer and a further session is called for next Monday evening when action will be taken looking toward the appointment of a scoutmaster.

The meeting Thursday night was called in response to a request of Corporal Skelly Post 9, G. A. R., who asked that the Boy Scouts participate in this year's Memorial Day parade.
For some months the organization has done nothing at all, due largely to the fact that they have been without a leader. Former scoutmasters have left town and Rev. J. B. Baker has been too busy to take up the work.

It is now the plan to appoint some one who will have in charge scout activities and will take special steps looking toward a camp this summer.
Properly conducted, such an outing is what does most to stimulate the scouts along their regular line of endeavor and it is the intention to make this summer's camp a model one.

At Monday evening's meeting final plans for Memorial Day will be considered. Rev. Mr. Baker has secured the services of Thomas H. Nixon to drill the Scouts for the parade.
Mr. Nixon's service in the student training camp last summer under the direction of Regular Army officers will prove of value to the Scouts and they may be expected to acquit themselves creditably in the parade on May 30th.

LOST, 4 TO 1

College Team Suffers its Second Defeat, this Time by Bucknell.

Bucknell's solution of Rehmeier's delivery and Gettysburg's inability to hit safely caused the locals to meet their second defeat on Thursday afternoon by a score of 4 to 1. Rehmeier was batted out of the box in the fifth and was followed by Rohrbaugh who had not appeared this season. He allowed but two hits and had six strikeouts. To-day the team left to play Ursinus and Albright. The Rock Hill game, scheduled for Thursday, was cancelled earlier in the week.

STATE GIVES NOTICE

County May Have to Pay Bill of $1135.29.

Auditor General Powell has notified the commissioners of this and other counties that the counties must pay the expense of the party enrollment, made recently. An expense of $1135-29 was entailed in Adams County. It was believed this would be considered a part of the primary election expense and therefore belong to the state for payment.

KILLED COPPERHEAD

County Commissioner Killed Snake as it was Going to Strike.

County Commissioner S. McC.
Eicholtz killed a three foot copperhead snake at his tract of woodland on Trone Hill, near the Narrows on Wednesday, just as it was about to strike at Curtis Cullison, of Franklin township, who was working for Mr.
Eicholtz. A club was used to deliver the well directed blow.

A Chi-Namel Demonstration

That is Different.

YOU can ask the Demonstrator to show you any Chi-Namel product you may be interested in, actually applied.

For instance—White Enamel, Porch Furniture Enamel, Gold and Aluminum Paint, Floor Wax, Furniture Polish, Colored Varnishes for staining and varnishing with one application.

She will not merely show you the package containing these materials, but show it in the brush, and applied before your eyes—in fact, you can take the brush and apply it yourself.

You can see the actual colors—see how easy it is to apply—how all brush marks disappear before it hardens.

This will be a demonstration worth while for any one who is responsible for the care and good appearance of the interior woodwork and furniture of a home.

By asking for a demonstration of any particular Chi-Namel product you will not place yourself under any obligation to buy; this demonstration is to acquaint the public with the use and economy of the home.

HUERTA'S RULE IS CRUMBLING

The Rebels Are Closing in on Mexico City.

HARRIED ON ALL SIDES

Revolt is Seething in the Capital and an Upheaval May Come at Any Moment.

Vera Cruz, Mex., May 15.—With the fall of Tampico the lines of advance of the Constitutional forces toward the south has been drawn from coast to coast and now embraces more than half the Republic of Mexico.

Observers express the opinion that the taking of Tampico by the Constitutionalists forms one of the closing scenes of the dictatorship of General Victoriano Huerta.

They believe his downfall is a question only of weeks and perhaps of days, before his control in the Federal capital ends in possible riot and bloodshed. Even if he maintains order in Mexico City they think that Francisco Villa's guns will soon be thundering in the suburbs of the capital and Huerta fleeing with the remnants of his army to Puebla, there to make a last stand.

General Huerta is now hemmed in by the Constitutionalists in the north, while his most important support is in the hands of American troops, and American warships are watching both coasts to see that no arms or ammunition may reach his harried forces.

Of all the important railroads in Mexico, only those running from the capital to Puerto Mexico, Salina Cruz and Manzanillo remain completely under Federal control.

Within sixty miles of Mexico City Emiliano Zapata and his lawless followers rule the entire state of Morelos. Farther south the Brothers Figueras and an army of bandits are running riot through the state of Guerrero. Both these forces menace Huerta from the south.

To the west of the capital the railroad to Manzanillo is open, but the American warships dominate this port, while to the east of Mexico City Vera Cruz is cut off and with it the whole stretch of wild country northward to Tampico.

The last American refugees who arrived from San Luis Potosi left there with the sound of distant firing marking the end of a twenty-day truce that accompanied the Constitutionalists' demand for the evacuation of the city. The Federal commander, General Joaquin Maas, evidently had refused the offer that he might march out with his troops and had begun a hopeless battle against heavy odds.

Saltillo, Monterey, Victoria and Tampico are now in the possession of the Constitutionalists and the whole of the surrounding territory has been swept clear of Federal troops.

The way is thus opened for the concentration of the Constitutionalists from the eastern to the western coast for their final march from San Luis Potosi onto the capital, 250 miles to the south.

General Huerta, therefore, is fighting with his back to a wall that offers little defense, for rumors are everywhere current that Zapata, and possibly the Figueras, with their followers, will combine with the victorious Constitutionalists and carry out an assault on Mexico City from the south as General Villa attacks on the north.

In Mexico City itself revolt against General Huerta's rule is seething. Constitutionalists agents work openly with handbills, while their organs in flame the citizens against the dictator. The provisional president is believed to be in constant danger of assassination, while the city is said to be liable at any moment to an outbreak of anarchy. This is confirmed by the stories of many refugees.

HUERTA ENVOYS SAIL

Peace Delegates Leave Havana For Key West, Fla.

Havana, Cuba, May 15.—Consideration of demands for the elimination of General Huerta from the presidency of Mexico will not be barred by the Mexican delegates to the mediation conference at Niagara Falls.

This became known when the delegates arrived on the liner Kronprinzessin Cecilie from Vera Cruz. They left almost immediately for Key West, Fla.

Augustin Rodriguez, one of the delegates, said: "We have ample authority to agree to anything consistent with Mexico's national decorum."

Asked whether that included the possible elimination of Huerta he replied: "That is a matter that will be taken up when the time arrives."

U. S. Envoys' Power Limited.
Washington, May 15.—It was made known in an authoritative way that Justice Joseph R. Lamar and Frederick W. Lehmann, the American delegates to the peace conference, would not be clothed with plenary powers to negotiate an agreement in relation to Mexico.

They must refer all suggestions to the state department before giving approval to them. By this means President Wilson and Secretary of State Bryan will be able to pass upon every proposal before any agreement in regard to it.

PANAMA CANAL IS PRACTICALLY OPEN

Barges Being Sent Through With Merchandise.

Washington, May 15.—Merchandise traffic is now passing through the Panama canal, according to the reports that have been received at the headquarters of the Panama railroad in New York and forwarded to Washington.

Though confirmation of the report has not yet reached the Washington office of the isthmian canal, it is known that ample provision has been made by Colonel Goethals for the institution of water service, limited at first strictly to barges, beginning not later than May 10.

As a matter of fact, according to the Panama railroad reports, the service actually began last Saturday, and a steady stream of barges in tow is now passing through the canal.

The tremendous congestion in inter-oceanic commerce, caused by the suspension of service on the Tehuantepec railroad in southern Mexico as an incident to the rebellion brought about this rather premature opening of the canal to trade.

Several of the great freight liners, which in conjunction with the similar service on the Pacific maintained trade lines between Europe and the Far East via Tehuantepec, have recently appeared at Colon and Panama offering cargoes for transshipment overland far beyond the capacity of the Panama railroad.

Finding that Colonel Goethals was willing to assist them by clearing an adequate channel for barges, at least, through the Cucharacha slide, the company secured a lot of the barges that have been used for harbor purposes at Colon and Panama and established this service as an overflow to assist the railroad in meeting the demands of trade.

MADERISTAS REPORTED SLAIN

Two Women and Three Children Murdered by Federals.

Vera Cruz, May 15.—The Mexican Federals are reported to have murdered Mrs. Gonzalez Salas and her three small children, and Miss Maria L. Hernandez, daughter of Rafael Hernandez, one of the wealthiest men in Mexico.

The husband of Mrs. Salas was the chief construction engineer under Madero, and the hatred that some of the Huerta faction have held toward him has made him fear for the safety of his family.

Francisco Madero, son of the slain president, is said to have sailed for the United States on the stamer Mexico.

Senator Brady Badly Hurt

Washington, May 15.—Senator William O. Brady, of Kentucky, was thrown to the ground while trying to board a street car in front of the senate office building and had two fingers of his left hand broken and was badly bruised. A deep gash was cut over one of his eyes and his face disfigured.

WEBBER TELLS OF DEATH PLOT

Swears to Becker's Part in Murder of Rosenthal.

MEETING OF THE GUNMEN

Story of How Police Lieutenant Ordered Death of Informer Is Retold Without Change.

New York, May 15.—"Bald Jack" Rose and his fellow conspirator, "Bridgie" Webber, both occupied the witness stand at the trial of former Police Lieutenant Charles Becker for the murder of Herman Rosenthal, the gambler.

The state called Rose in re-direct examination, reinforcing parts of his narrative that the defense had attacked. When he left the stand it was the general opinion that this narrative in the main had not been shaken.

Webber was then called by the prosecution to tell of the part he played in the murder plot, and of the meeting of the four gunmen, now all dead, at his poker rooms.

Webber's testimony opened with questions that brought out the fact that he had abandoned the occupation of poker room owner for that of manufacturer of paper boxes.

"Did you ever have any business with Jack Rose?" he was asked. "I collected money for him."

"Did you have any business with Becker?" "I collected money for him from gamblers."

Webber testified that Rose introduced him to Becker and that the latter frequented his (Webber's) poker room. Then came the description of the plot "to get Rosenthal." "I was standing in front of my place one night when Sam Schepps came over, and said that Becker wanted to see me at One Hundred and Twenty-fourth street and Seventh avenue. This was about three weeks before Rosenthal was killed."

"Whom did you see there?" "Jack Rose, Becker, Harry Vallon and Sam Schepps. I heard Becker say to Rose and Vallon: 'The — is going all the way. He has been to McAdoo; he has been to Waldo and is trying to make connections with the mayor. He is also trying to get to the district attorney now.'"

"Did you have any conversation with him alone?" "Yes; he took me aside and said: 'Bridgie, will you see the boys and have the — fixed?' I said: 'Do you mean to have him croaked?' and he said, 'Yes.' I said: 'That's pretty serious business,' and he said: 'A whole lot of people will suffer if he isn't croaked.' Then I said 'All right, Charlie, if you feel that way about it, I will see the boys and attend to the matter.'"

"What did you do on the night of July 15, 1912?" "I went to a prize fight at Madison Square Garden. I left about 12:15 o'clock on the morning of July 16, and went to my poker room at Forty-second street and Sixth avenue. I found Jack Rose, Harry Vallon, Sam Schepps, Lefty Louie, Gyp the Blood, Whitey Lewis and Dago Frank there. They were eating and drinking."

"Somebody asked me to go to the Metropole hotel and see if Rosenthal was there. I left, went to the Metropole and saw Rosenthal sitting at a table with a number of friends. I then returned to my poker room and the four boys and Harry Vallon went out to Shapiro's car and went around to the Metropole. I walked around when I arrived at the Metropole I saw the body of Rosenthal lying on the sidewalk. I waited around for a while."

Mr. Whitman carried Webber over his route after the murder. "When you got to your place whom did you find there?" "Jack Rose and Jack Sullivan."

"Did anybody join you later?" "Yes." "Who was it?" "Lieutenant Becker." "Did you talk to him?" "Jack Rose told Becker that Rosenthal's body was over in the station and said: 'Charlie, this is terrible.' Becker said he had been over to the police station, and then he said: 'I saw this fellow lying there and I felt like taking out my knife and cutting out his tongue as a warning to squealers.'"

"Jack Rose then said that there was going to be a lot of trouble over it, but Becker said there would be no trouble and that it would all blow over in a few days. Becker said that every body should get out of town for a few days, and Jack said he did not have any money. Then Becker turned to me and said: 'Bridgie, give Jack a thousand dollars.'"

He fore being heard these delegates must show proper credentials. This is in Emilio Rabasa, one of the mediators.

U. S. WARSHIPS IN TAMPICO HARBOR

Admiral Mayo Anchors Part of Fleet Before Town.

Vera Cruz, Mex., May 15.—Wireless reports from Rear Admiral Mayo to Admiral Badger say that in obedience to orders, the cruiser Des Moines and the gunboat Dolphin have entered the Penuco river and are occupying an anchorage which gives their guns command of the city.

No reason has been made public for this order, which came from Washington, and it is surmised that it is only for the purpose of affording immediate assistance to the twenty Americans who would not leave the city on perhaps to protect American property. Three Federal gunboats are now lying under the shadow of the guns of the flagship Connecticut, and one of the passengers aboard the Zaragoza is General Zaragoza, the Federal commander himself, after whose father the ship is named.

General Zaragoza is the man whose soldiers arrested the marines and sailors and precipitated all the trouble between the United States and Mexico. He would not salute them, but he is glad of the protection now.

Forty marines, men and women, arrived at Vera Cruz on Thursday. Nine of them show the effects of experiences since April 22, enough to break down the strongest constitution. The twenty-one came through without an incident, but the nineteen, who left Orizaba on the first day's fighting were arrested six times in the twenty-two days' fighting and spent all of the time but four full days in prisons.

When they saw the American flag many of them burst into tears. They tell a story of filthy cells, bad food and harsh treatment, which inflamed the hearts of all who heard it.

HUERTA IS UNCONCERNED

Apparently Not Worried by Possibilities of Mediation Conference.
Mexico City, Mex., May 15.—General Huerta is apparently concerned but little over the progress that may be made in the peace negotiations at Niagara Falls.

His delegates to the conference have as yet received no instructions. Advice as to the effect that the dictator will reject suggestions from the mediators that he retire, should such a proposal be made.

It is known that great pressure has been brought to bear recently to persuade Huerta to abdicate. Archbishop Mora argued long with him just before the resignation of Jose Portillo y Rojas as secretary of foreign affairs was demanded and submitted.

The danger to Huerta still lies in an uprising of the police and people of the capital as much as in the advance of the rebels. Sentiment against the dictator is growing.

NO SUCH THING AS STEEL GRAY EYES

Brown and Black Illusion Also, Says Expert.

CHESTNUT COLOR PURE TYPE

Scientific Examination Destroys Poetic Fictions of Novelists, According to Bertillon Chief of Detroit Bureau. Unpigmented and Maroon Are Basic Shades Adopted After Many Tests.

The steel gray eye found in novels and often believed in by the general public is a myth, declares Lieutenant Fred Quackenbush of the Bertillon and identification bureau of the Detroit police department. Puncturing popular delusion still further, Lieutenant Quackenbush says that the deep black eye exists only in the mind of the artist, and that all the other descriptive adjectives in use for the designation of the color of the eye participate in the same confusion of popular opinion.

Backed up by Bertillon as his authority and the added weight of 1,000 identification experts, notably Captain Evans of Chicago, Lieutenant Quackenbush pays his respects to "the brown eyed damsel" in the words, "They do not exist."

The analytical method as mapped out by Bertillon has been tested in prisons, jails, asylums and institutions for twenty years past. To the expert the brown, the gray and the black eye does not exist.

"The gray eye which we read that great men are endowed with is an illusion," said Lieutenant Quackenbush. "For purposes of expert identification there exists no such colored eyes. The gray eye of the general public is nothing more or less than a blue eye with a more or less yellowish tinge, which appears gray solely on account of the shadow cast by the eyebrows. Nothing is more inexact or vague than the designation 'gray.' The so called gray eyes are generally of light tone.

No Black Eyes Either. In our work they are termed slate blue for the deep tones and violet intermediate blue for the lighter tones. The eye designated as black is not of that color. There are no more black irises than there are truly gray ones. The eyes thus designated are generally deep maroon and sometimes deep slate blue.

"The epithet—and I use the word properly—'brown' is frequently applied to eyes that are, properly speaking, known as medium maroon or dark maroon.

"For the purpose of identification from a truly scientific standpoint the basis of notation rests on this point: There are in the human species only two fundamental types of eyes—the unpigmented and the pure maroon eyes. All other hues are regarded as intermediate between these two hues.

"By unpigmented eyes, the eyes which, examined at close hand, appear to be devoid of orange yellow matter, we mean the azure, slaty or intermediate colored eye. This is the 'blue' eye of the population of northern Europe.

Chestnut the Real Shade. "The hue of the pure maroon eyes is uniform, and recalls the shell of the fruit of this name (Italian chestnut) when it is ripe and fresh. It is the 'black' or 'dark brown' eye of common parlance, the eye of the Arab, of the negro, and southerners in general."

Lieutenant Quackenbush says that the identification experts of the world have their own chart, prepared by Bertillon, whereby the eyes are classified according to color. When gazing into the eyes of a person being registered the expert looks into the eyes in the same direction as the light rays strike. In this manner "false colors" are avoided, and the proper classification determined.

Grouped under the classification chart, eyes are divided into seven divisions, with many "sections" therein. The seven divisions are: Iris, unpigmented, iris pigmented with yellow, iris pigmented with orange, iris pigmented with chestnut, iris pigmented with maroon grouped in circle, iris pigmented with maroon streaked with green tint, and iris pigmented with pure maroon.

OLDER THAN THE INCAS.

Tiahuanaco Ruins Indicate Most Ancient Bolivian City.

A city so old that even the legendary lore of the Incas is dumb concerning the people who built it; a city which 1,000 years ago had been so long dead that even song, story and tradition had forgotten every vestige of its history when Columbus discovered the new world. Such is the ancient city of Tiahuanaco, whose ruins are crumbling into dust not far from the southern shore of Lake Titicaca, in Bolivia.

The little village of Tiahuanaco is located on the railroad which connects La Paz, the modern capital of Bolivia. The ruins of ancient Tiahuanaco are not over a half mile from the village, writes Edward Albee in the Monthly Bulletin of the Pan-American union.

A traveler stopping in the little town and ignorant of the proximity of the ruins would be astonished to observe the number of beautifully cut stones built into parts of adobe huts of the most primitive character.

LIGHT SOUGHT IN PERU ON ORIGIN OF MAN IN AMERICA

Second Expedition to Land of the Incas Led by Professor Bingham.

A second expedition is to further explore Peru, the ancient home of the Incas, under the auspices of the National Geographic society and Yale university. The director of the expedition will be Professor Hiram Bingham of Yale university, who at the head of the 1912 expedition uncovered the ancient fortress city of Machu Picchu, the most remarkable group of buildings discovered in South America since the conquest of Peru, nearly 400 years ago.

The object of this expedition, according to Director Grosvenor of the Geographic society, is to make a geographical reconnaissance of a portion of southern Peru, including the Cordillera Vilcabamba and some portions of the Apurimac and Urubamba watersheds. This region is a part of the eastern edge of the great Andean plateau. The Cordillera Vilcabamba is a chain of dissected mountains rising 10,000 to 20,000 feet above sea level, situated between south latitudes 12 and 14. Their bases are clothed with tropical jungles, while their summits are mantled with snow and glaciers. In the main they are unexplored. As one of the most inaccessible parts of the Andes, they have been occupied from time to time by the ancient peoples of Peru.

In the vicinity are ruins of Machu Picchu, Palenque and Choquequiran. The reported presence of other ruins and the actual existence of some that have been seen but not studied or mapped make the region a particularly attractive area in which to study the problem of man's origin and distribution in South America.

The plan of work includes the establishment of two meteorological stations at different elevations for the taking of systematic records for two years; a study of the distribution and history of food plants of this region; the collection of data respecting the forms of distribution of vertebrates, particularly mammals and reptiles; a survey of the present Indians inhabiting this region, including a study of their dialects, the collection of anthropometric data and the collection and study of the skeletal remains; an archaeological reconnaissance of the entire area and a continuation of the studies begun by the first expedition looking toward a geographical interpretation of the Spanish chronicles of the era of discovery and exploration, with particular reference to the identification of ancient place names, the story of Machu Picchu and its connection with the history of the Incas.

MEXICO'S HOPE IS IN ITS WOMEN

Moral and Mental Superiors of Men, Says Dr. Butler.

EAGER AND APT STUDENTS.

Growth of the Work of the Mission Schools Described by Man Who Has Spent Forty Years in It—More Schools the Best Guard Against War, Which Women Oppose.

In speaking of Mexican women and the work which American women missionaries are doing among them, Dr. John W. Butler, head of the Methodist Episcopal mission, with headquarters at Mexico City and branches throughout the interior of the country, who has arrived in New York after a flight from Vera Cruz, says:

"Mexican women are, as a rule, mentally and morally superior to the average Mexican man, and they are coming in larger and larger numbers to our mission schools. They are beautiful looking women.

"You sometimes hear it said that Mexican men and women are not ready for education; that they are a degenerate lot and have not the intellectual ability to fit them for doing work in our schools. This is not true.

Keen, Quick Students. "The Mexican woman especially is keen and quick, and we have many examples of what they have done to show that they are well fitted for intellectual training. For instance, a girl whose name is Juana Palacios went through our missionary school and the government schools and then entered Boston university. Her English was very faulty, but in two years she won her M. A. with honors. She is not an exception. We are proud of the many girls who achieve such distinction in America after they have begun their education with us.

"We now have about 5,000 children in our mission schools, and in all the Protestant mission schools there are from 15,000 to 20,000 children. The encouraging part of it is that many of these children are of the second generation of those whom we have educated. It is forty years ago since I sailed for Mexico, and in those forty years I have seen the work grow from its meager beginning, when we were in desperate need of money and facilities to carry on our work and when the attitude of the country was hostile to us, to the present time, when we are getting the second generation of young Mexicans and an increasing number of them every year.

Education Only Hope For Mexico. "The only salvation for Mexico must come, it seems to me, through education of the people. Only in this way can they be fitted for popular government, for with 80 per cent of the population illiterate, as they are at the present time, it is useless to talk about popular elections and a government of the people. They aren't ready for it, and they won't be until they have had another forty years of education."

When asked the attitude of the Mexican women toward war, Dr. Butler said:

"The most intelligent women are opposed to it, just as the most intelligent men are. Some women may be excited and their imagination aroused at the thought of war, but not many of them fall to realize what it would mean. The women have a good chance to know what war is like, for they are the commissary department in the army. You will see four or five hundred soldiers marching along, and behind them will come forty or fifty women carrying the 'duffle' of supplies and provisions."

Hotel Humorist Sketches the Career of a Person of Lofly Ambitions.

Simeon Ford, famous for his wit, has retired from the hotel business, and at a dinner in his honor given by brother bonifaces in New York he delivered one of the best of his many humorous speeches.

"When I was fifteen years old," said he, "and had got as far as the fourth reader and decimal fractions I decided that any more knowledge would subject my brain to undue strain, so I determined to give my genius a chance to expand in some large city. I hesitated whether to favor New York and go into partnership with J. P. Morgan or go to Boston and tie up with Ralph Waldo Emerson. As the fare to Boston was 50 cents cheaper, I inclined toward a literary career, but while I was wavering a local sport offered me $2 if I would act as chaperon or companion de voyage to a bull pup he wanted to send to New York. That decided me. The die was cast."

"It was a lucky day for me when the admirable woman who is the mother of my children consented to join her fortunes to mine. At that time I was a poor young lawyer. There were few younger and none poorer. But for this good lady's lack of foresight I would probably be a poor old lawyer today."

"It is only fair to add that I have been just as poor a hotel keeper as I was a lawyer; but, as old Jim Breslin used to say: 'You don't have to know anything about hotel keeping in order to keep a hotel. Just open up and the boarders will tell you how to run it.'"

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

CRISP YOUNG DANDELIONS.

THE housewife who lives in the country or has a lawn may draw on these for her supply of spring greens. In the cities blanched cultivated dandelions are sold in the markets.

The young leaves are suitable for salads, while for cooking the older plants may be used.

Gather in the morning while fresh from the dew. Wash thoroughly; then let stand in cold water for an hour or two to crisp and freshen.

With Milk Sauce.

Dandelions With Vegetables.—Put in a saucepan a pint of well washed dandelions, half a dozen medium sized potatoes sliced, three onions, two tablespoonsful of chopped parsley, a carrot chopped into dice and a little celery. Cover with a quart of boiling water and boil rapidly for half an hour; then season with salt, pepper, a tablespoonful of butter and a cupful of good milk.

Stewed Dandelions.—Wash and drain. Cover with boiling salted water, cook until tender, drain, chop fine, add a tablespoonful of melted butter, a tablespoonful of rich cream and salt and pepper to taste. Beat until quite smooth and return to the fire until hot; then serve at once.

Cooked With Meat.

Dandelions With Bacon.—Clean thoroughly half a peck of dandelions and put over the fire with boiling water to cover. Cook ten minutes, drain, return to the vessel and cover with fresh boiling water. Add a pound of bacon, two onions chopped, some salt and a bit of red pepper. Cover and boil until tender. Take up the dandelions and arrange in a mound on a hot dish surrounded with bacon sliced thin.

Dandelions With Eggs.—Cut off the roots of the plants, wash the leaves, putting them in a saucepan full of boiling water, and let boil for an hour. Then drain the leaves out of the water, put them in a frying pan with butter, salt and pepper and stir the mixture till thoroughly heated. Serve with sliced hard boiled eggs.

A Savory Concoction.

Dandelions and Pork.—Gather the dandelion leaves when they are young and tender. Wash them thoroughly in two or three waters; then put them into a granite kettle and cover with boiling water. Add a piece of soda the size of a pea, let them come to a boil and then drain off the water. Cover them again with boiling water, add a small piece of fat salt pork and cook from one to two hours. When the leaves are tender remove the pork and drain in a colander, chop them into fine pieces, add salt and pepper to taste and a little melted butter. Garnish with hard boiled eggs.

Medical Advertising Old People Gain

Strength by Taking Vinol. Here Is Proof.

So many cases like this are constantly coming to our attention that we publish it for the benefit of others.—Mr. John Widmayer, of Jackson, Mich., says: "I am nearly 70 years of age, and was in a feeble condition but Vinol has done wonders for me. It is the best medicine to create strength I have ever seen and I have taken a good many of them: Last spring I was run down and worn out but I took Vinol and soon regained my strength. Vinol is certainly an invigorating tonic for old people."

It is the medicinal curative elements of the cod livers without oil aided by the blood-making and strength-creating properties of tonic iron which are contained in Vinol that makes it so efficient in such cases.

If you have an aged father, mother or anyone in your family who needs a strength-creating tonic, try Vinol on our offer to give back your money if it fails to benefit. People's Drug Store, Gettysburg, Pa.

P. S. For itching, burning skin try our Saxo Salve. We guarantee it.

Here Is Good News for Stomach Victims

Some very remarkable results are being obtained by treating stomach, liver and intestinal troubles with pure vegetable oils, which exert a cleansing, soothing and purifying action upon the lower bowels, removing the obstructions of poisonous fecal matter and gases and preventing their absorption by the blood. This done, the food is allowed free passage from the stomach, fermentation ceases and stomach troubles quickly disappear.

George H. Mayr, for twenty years a leading Chicago druggist, cured himself and many of his friends of stomach, liver and intestinal troubles of years' standing by this treatment, and so successful was the remedy he devised that it has since been placed in the hands of druggists all over the country, who have sold thousands of bottles.

Though absolutely harmless, the effect of the medicine is sufficient to convince any one of its remarkable effectiveness, and within 24 hours the sufferer feels like a new person. Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy is now sold here by

When a Gettysburg citizen comes to the front, telling his friends and neighbors of his experience, you can rely on his sincerity. The statements of people residing in far away places do not command your confidence. Home endorsement is the kind that backs Doan's Kidney Pills. Such testimony is convincing. Investigation proves it true. Below is a statement of a Gettysburg resident. No stronger proof of merit can be had.

Mrs. J. Menchey, 46 Breckenridge street, Gettysburg, Pa., says: "Since I used and publicly endorsed Doan's Kidney Pills some years ago I have had no further need of a kidney medicine. I never enjoyed very good health and when kidney complaint came on, it caused me much distress. I had pains in my back and frequently had dizzy spells and chills. When a friend told me to try Doan's Kidney Pills, I got a box at the People's Drug Store. This remedy acted promptly and before long, I was in good health."

The VALIANTS of VIRGINIA

By FALIE ERMINE RIVES (MRS. POST WHEELER)
ILLUSTRATED BY LAUREN STOUT

Copyright 1912 by Doris Post Wheeler

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—John Vallant, a rich society favorite, suddenly discovers that the Vallant corporation, which his father founded and which was the principal source of his wealth, has failed.

CHAPTER II—He voluntarily turns over his private fortune to the receiver for the corporation.

CHAPTER III—His entire remaining possessions consist of an old motor car, a white bull dog and Damory court, a neglected estate in Virginia.

CHAPTER IV—He learns that this estate came into the family by royal grant and has been in the possession of the Vallants ever since.

CHAPTER V—On the way to Damory court he meets Shirley Dandridge, an Auburn-haired beauty, and decides that he is going to like Virginia immensely.

CHAPTER VI—An old negro tells Shirley the story of the great trouble for her on account of a man.

CHAPTER VII—Uncle Jefferson, an old negro, takes Vallant to Damory court.

CHAPTER VIII—Shirley's mother, Mrs. Dandridge, and Major Bristow exchange reminiscences during which it is revealed that the major, Vallant's father, and a man named Sassoon, were rivals for the hand of Mrs. Dandridge in her youth. Sassoon and Vallant fought a duel on her account in which the former was killed.

CHAPTER IX—Vallant finds Damory court overgrown with weeds and creepers and the buildings in a very much neglected condition. Uncle Jefferson and his wife, Aunt Daphne, are engaged as servants.

CHAPTER X—Vallant explores his ancestral home. He is surprised by a fox hunting party which invades his estate. He recognizes Shirley at the head of the party.

CHAPTER XI—He gives sanctuary to the cornered fox. Gossips discuss the advent of the new owner and recall the tragedy in which the elder Vallant took part.

Till the sun was high John Vallant lay on his back in the fragrant grass, meditatively watching a bucaneroing chicken-hawk draw widening circles against the blue and listening to the vibrant tattoo of a "pecker-wood" on a far-away tree, and the timorous wet whistle of a bob-white. The whole place was very quiet now. For just one thrilling moment it had burgeoned into sound and movement: when the sweaty horses had stood snorting and stamping in the yard with the hounds scattering between their legs and the riding coats twinkling like rubies in the early sunshine!

Had she recognized him as the smudged tinkler of the stalled car? "She saw me drop that wretched brute through the window," he chuckled. "I could take oath to that. But she didn't give me away, true little sport that she was. And she won't. I can't think of any reason, but I know. Was she angry? I wonder!"

At length he rose and went back to the house. With a bunch of keys he had found he went to the stables, after some difficulty gained access, and unlocked the crazy doors and windows open to the sun. The building was airy and well-lighted and contained a dozen roomy box-stalls, a spacious loft and a carriage-house. The straw bedding had been unrenewed, mice-gnawed sacking and rotted hay lay in the mangers, and the warped harness, hanging on its pegs, was a smelly mass of mildew and decay. He found a stick, mowed away the festooning cobwebs, and moved the debris piece-meal.

"There!" he said with satisfaction. "There's a place for the motor—if Uncle Jefferson ever gets it here."

It was noon when he returned, after a wash-up in the lake, to the meal with which Aunt Daphne, in a costume dimly suggestive of a bran-meat poultice with a gingham apron on, regaled him. Fried chicken, corn-bread so soft and fluffy that it had to be lifted from the pan with a spoon, browned potatoes, and to his surprise, fresh milk. "Ah done druv oveh ol' cow oveh, suh," explained Aunt Daphne. "Case she gotter be milked, er she run dry ez de Red Sea fo' de chillon ob Izril."

"Aunt Daphne," inquired Vallant with his mouth full, "what do you call this green thing?"

"Dat? Dat's jes' turnip-tops, suh, wid er hunk er bacon in de pot. Lawd-er-me, et cer'n'y do me good ter see yo' git arter it dat way, suh. Reck'n yo' got er appetite! Hyuh, Hyuh!"

"I have, I never guessed it before, and it's a magnificent discovery. However, it suggests unwelcome reflections. Aunt Daphne, how long do you estimate a man can dine like this on—well, say on a hundred dollars?"

"Er hundred dollars, suh? Dat's er right smart heap o' money, deed et! Well suh, 'pen on whut yo' raises. Er yo' raises yo' own gyarden-sass en chickens en eggs, Ah reckon yo' kin live longan dan dat ar Methoosalum, en still haf mos' of it in de ol' stock-in."

"Ah! I can grow all those things myself, you think?"

"Yo' cert'n'y kin," said Aunt Daphne. "Ev'body do. De chickens done peck to deyselfs en de yuddah things—yo' o'ny gotter 'courage' 'em en dey jes' grows."

Vallant ate his dessert with a thoughtful smile wrinkling his brow. As he pushed back his chair he smote his hands together and laughed aloud. "Back to the soil!" he said. "John Vallant, farmer! The miracle of it is that it sounds good to me. I want to raise my own grub and till my own soil. I want to be my own man! And I'm beginning to see my way. Crops will have to wait for another season, but there's water and pasture for cattle now. There's timber—lots of it—on that hillside, too. I must look into that."

He filled his pipe and climbed the staircase to the upper floor. There were many bedrooms with great four-posted, canopied beds and old-fashioned carved furniture of mahogany and curly-maple, and in one he found a great cedar-lined chest filled with bed-linen and nappery. In these rooms were more evidences of decay. The bedroom he mentally chose for his own was the plainest of all, and was above the library, fronting the vagon-bond garden. It had a great black desk with many glass-knobbed drawers and a book-rack.

He lingered longest in a room whose door was painted The Hilarium. It had evidently been a nursery and schoolroom. Here on the walls were many shelves wound over with networks of cobwebs, and piled with the oddest assemblage of toys. There were school-books, too, thumbed and dog-eared, from First Reader to Caesar's Gallic Wars, with names of small Vallants scrawled on their fly-leaves. He carefully relocked the door of this room; he wanted to dust those toys and books with his own hands.

In the upper hall again he leaned from the window, sniffing the far-flung scent of orchards and peach-blown fence-rows. The soft whirling sound of a bird's wing went past, almost brushing his startled face, and the old oaks seemed to stretch their bent limbs with a faithful brute-like yawn of pleasure. In the room below he could hear the vigorous sound of Aunt Daphne's hard-driven broom and the sound flooded the echoing space with a comfortable commotion.

He went to his trunk and fished out a soft shirt on which he knotted a loose tie, exchanged his Panama for a slouch hat, and whistling the barcarole from Tales of Hoffmann, went gaily out. "I feel tremendously alive today," he confided to the dog, as he tramped through the lush grass. "If you see me lade the muck out of that fountain with my own fair hands, don't have a fit. I'm liable to do anything."

She Bit Her Lips as He Snapped the Offending Bole Short Off.

His eye swept up and down the slope. "There probably isn't a finer site for a house in the whole South," he told himself. "The living-rooms front south and west. We'll get scrumptious sunsets from that back porch. And on the other side there's the view clear to the Blue Ridge."

He skirted the lake. "Only to grub out some of the lilies—there's too many of them—and straighten the rim—and weed the pebble margin to give those green rocks a show. I'll build a little wharf below them to dive from, and—yes, I'll stock it with spotted trout."

He was but a few hundred yards from the house, yet the silence was so deep that there might have been no habitation within fifty miles. All at once he stopped short; there was a sudden movement in the thicket beyond—the sound of light fast footfalls, as of some one running away.

He made a lunge for the dog, but with a growl Chum tore himself from the restraining grasp and dashed into the bushes. "A child, no doubt," he thought as he plunged in pursuit, "and that lubberly brute will scare it half to death!"

He pulled up with an exclamation. In a narrow wood-path a little way from him, partly hidden by a windfall, stood a girl, her skirt transfixed with a wickedly jagged sapling. He saw instantly how it had happened; the windfall had blocked the way, and she had sprung clear over it, not noting the screened spear, which now held her as effectually as any railroad spike.

In another moment Vallant had reached her and met her face, flushed, half defiant, her eyes a blue gleam of smoldering anger as she desperately, almost savagely, thrust wild tendrils of flame-colored hair beneath the broad curved brim of her straw hat. At her feet lay a great armful of cape jessamines.

A little thrill, light and warm and joyous, ran through him. Until that instant he had not recognized her.

CHAPTER XIII.

John Vallant Makes a Discovery.

"I'm so sorry," was what he said, as he knelt to release her, and she was grateful that his tone was unmixt with amusement. She bit her lips, as by sheer strength of elbow and knee he snapped the offending bole short off—one of those quick exhibitions of reserved strength that every woman likes.

"I don't know how I could have been so silly—thank you so much," said Shirley, panting slightly from her exertions. "I'm not the least bit hurt—only my dress—and you know very well that I wasn't afraid of that ridiculous dog." A richer glow stole to her cheeks as she spoke, a burning recollection of a rose, which from her horse that morning at Damory Court, she had glimpsed in its glass on the porch.

Both laughed a little. He imagined that he could smell that wonderful hair, a subtle fragrance like that of sun-dried seaweed or the elusive scent that clings to a tuft of long-plucked Spanish moss. "Chum stands absolved, then," he said, bending to sweep together the scattered jessamine. "Do you—do you run like that when you're not frightened?"

"When I'm caught red-handed. Don't you?"

He looked puzzled.

She pointed to the flowers. "I had stolen them, and I was trying to 'scape off wid 'em' as the negroes say. Shocking, isn't it? But you see, nobody has lived here since long before I was born, and I suppose the flower-thieving habit has become ingrown."

"But," he interrupted, "there's acres of them going to waste. Why on earth shouldn't you have them?"

"Of course I know better today, but there was a—special reason. We have none and this is the nearest place where they grow. My mother wanted some for this particular day."

"Good heavens!" he cried. "You don't think you can't go right on taking them? Why, you can 'scape off' with the whole garden any time!"

A droll little gleam of azure mischief darted at him suddenly out of her eyes and then dodged back again. "Aren't you just a little rash with other people's property?"

"Other people's?"

"What will the owner say?"

He bent back one of the long jessamine stems and wound it around the others. "I can answer for him. Besides, I owe you something, you know. I robbed you this morning—of your brush."

She looked at him, abruptly serious. "Why did you do that?"

"Sanctuary. His two beady eyes begged so hard for it. Twenty ravening hounds," they said, "and a dozen galloping horses. And look what a poor shivering little red-brown morsel I am!"

For just an instant the bronze-gold head gave a quick imperious toss, like a high-mettled pony under the flick of the whip. But as suddenly the shadow of resentment passed; the mobile face under the bent hat-brim turned thoughtful. She looked again at him. "Do you think it's wrong to kill things?" she asked gravely.

"Oh, dear, no," he smiled. "I haven't a singleism. I'm not even a vegetarian."

"But you would be if you had to kill your own meat?"

"Perhaps. So many of us would. As a matter of fact, I don't hunt myself, but I'm no reformer."

"Why don't you hunt?"

"I don't enjoy it." He flushed slightly. "I hate firearms," he said, a trifle diffidently. "I always have. I don't know why. Idiosyncrasy, I suppose. But I shouldn't care for hunting, even with bows and arrows. I would kill a tiger or a poisonous reptile, or anything else, in case of necessity. But even then I should hardly enjoy it. I know some animals are pests and have to be killed. Some men do, too. But I don't like to do it myself."

"Wouldn't that theory lead to a wholesale evasion of responsibility?"

"Perhaps. I'm no philosopher. But a blackbird or a red fox is so pretty, even when he is thieving, that I'd let him have the corn. I'm like the Lord High Executioner in 'The Mikado' who was so tender-hearted that he couldn't execute anybody and planned to begin with guinea-pigs and work up. Only I'm afraid I couldn't even manage the guinea-pigs."

She laughed. "You wouldn't find many to practice on here. Do you raise guinea-pigs up North?"

"Ah," he said ruefully, "you tag me, too. Have I by chance a large letter N tattooed upon my manly brow? But I suppose it's the accent. Uncle Jefferson catalogued me in five minutes. He said he didn't know why I was from 'de Norf' but he 'knowed' it. I've annexed him and his wife, by the way."

"You're lucky to have them. Unc' Jefferson and Aunt Daph might have slipped out of a plantation of the last century. They're absolutely ante-bellum. Most of the negroes are more or less spoiled, as you'll find, I'm afraid." She turned the conversation bluntly. "Had you seen Damory Court before?"

"No, never."

"Do you like the general plan of the place?"

"Do I like it?" cried John Vallant. "Do I like it!"

A quick pleasure glanced across her face. "It's nice of you to say it that way. We ask that question so often it's become mechanical. You see, it's our great show-place."

At that moment a patter of foot-steps and shrill shrieks came flying over the last-year's leaves beyond the lilac bushes. It's Rickey Snyder, she said, peering out smilingly as two children, pursued and pursuer, burst into view. "Hush!" she whispered; "I wonder what they are up to."

The pair came in a whirl through the bushes. The foremost was a seven-year-old negro girl, in a single short cottonade garment, wizened, barelegged and bareheaded, her black wool parted in little angular patches and tightly wrapped with bits of cord. The other was white and as freckled as a turkey's egg, with hair cropped like a boy's. She held a carving-knife out from a shingle, whose edge had been deeply ensanguined by poke-berry juice. The pursued one stumbled under a root and came to earth in a heap, while the other pounced upon her like a wildcat.

"Hold still, you limb of Satan," she scolded. "How can I do it when you won't stay still?"

"Oh, lawd," moaned the prostrate one, in simulated terror; "oh, Doctah, good Doctah Snyder, has Ah gotter hab dat operation? Is yo' sho' gwine ter twister aroun' mah insides wid dem knives en saws en things?"

"It won't hurt," reassured the would-be operator; "no more than it did Miss Poly Gifford. And I'll put your liver right back again."

"Wait er minute. Ah jes' remembahs Ah fo'got ter make mah will. Ah leahs—"

"Nonsense!" objected the other irritably. "You made it yesterday. They always do it beforehand."

"No, suh; Ah done clean forgot et. Ah leahs mah thimble ter de Mefodis' church, en mah black en w'ite kitten ter Rickey Snyder, en—"

A twig snapped under Vallant's foot. Both scrambled to their feet, the black girl to look at them with a wide self-conscious grin. Rickey, tossing her short hair back from her freckled face, came toward them.

"My goodness, Miss Shirley," she said, "we didn't see you at all." She looked at Vallant. "Are you the man that's going to fix up Damory Court?" she inquired, without any tedious formalities.

"Yes," said Vallant.

"Well," she said critically, "you've got your job cut out for you. But I should say you're the kind to do it."

"Rickey!" Shirley's voice tried to be stern, but there was a hint of laughter in it.

"What did I say now?" inquired Rickey. "I'm sure I meant it to be complimentary."

"It was," said Vallant. "I shall try to deserve your good opinion."

"But what a ghastly play!" exclaimed Shirley. "Where did you learn it?"

"We were playing Miss Poly Gifford in the hospital," Rickey answered. "She's got a whole lot of little pebbles what they cut out—"

"Oh, Rickey!" expostulated Shirley with a shudder.

"They did. She keeps them in a little pasteboard box like wedding-cake, with a blue ribbon around it. She was showing it to Miss Mattie Sue yesterday. She was telling her all about it. She said all the women there showed each other their cuts and bragged about how long they were."

"You certainly have a highly developed taste for the dramatic," said Shirley. "I wonder what your next effort will be."

"It's tomorrow," Rickey informed her. "We're going to have the duel between Vallant and Sassoon."

The smile was stricken from John Vallant's face. A duel—the duel—between Vallant and Sassoon! He felt his blood beat quickly. Had there been such a thing in his father's life? Was that what had blighted it?

"Only not here where it really happened, but in the Meredith orchard. Greenie's going to be—"

"Ah ain't!" contradicted Greenie. "Ah ain't gwine ter be dat Vallant, no-how!"

"You are, too!" insisted Rickey, wrathfully. "You needn't be so picky and choosy—and after she kills Sassoon, we put the bloodhounds on her trail."

Greenie tittered. "Dey ain't no dawg aroun' heah'd tech me," she said, "en 'sides—"

"But, Rickey," Shirley interposed, "that wasn't a murder. That was a duel between gentlemen. They don't—"

"I know it," assented Rickey cheerfully. "But it makes it more exciting. Will you come, Miss Shirley, deed and double? I won't charge you any admission."

"I can't promise," said Shirley. "By the way, isn't it about time Miss Mattie Sue had her tea?"

"It certainly is, Miss Shirley!" said Rickey, with penitent emphasis. "I clean forgot it, and she'll row me up the gum-stump! Come on, Greenie," and she started off through the bushes.

Sage Tea Turns Gray Hair Dark

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Color and Lustre to Hair

That beautiful, even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray, streaked and looks dry, wispy and scraggly, just an application of two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.

Don't bother to prepare the tonic; you can get from any drug store a 50 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," ready to use. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color, thickness and lustre of your hair and remove dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair.

Everybody uses "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur" because it dardens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy, lustrous and abundant.

To Take Out Coffee Stains. The most difficult of all stains to take out are those made by coffee. With care, however, the stain can be removed from the most delicate silk or woolen fabric. Rub the mark gently with a little pure glycerine, then rinse it in lukewarm water, lay a cloth over the damp part on the wrong side, and press with a cool iron until dry. Do not wet more of the material than is absolutely necessary.

MCCORMICK—A Friend of Labor When Not a Candidate and a Man Who Puts Money--Not Promises--Into the Pockets of His Employees

Secretary of Labor Wilson says he has personally investigated the labor record of Vance C. McCormick as a public official and a private citizen and finds it all right; that McCormick stood for the program of Progressive Democracy which included the demands of labor at a time when he had no expectation of being a candidate for any office and that he hopes the wage workers will not be deceived by unfair and misleading statements.

Wilson also says that in a private establishment—The Patriot—McCormick pays his men "higher wages than the Union rate calls for."

At Reading, May 10, delegates from 13 counties to a convention of the Eastern Pennsylvania District, International Typographical Union, unanimously adopted resolutions resenting and declaring false statements that The Patriot is a non-union shop. They say none but Union men are employed by The Patriot.

A man who has been fair to Labor when not a candidate can be trusted to be fair if nominated and elected Governor—and Labor wins if it helps to

BOY TELLS HOW HE KILLED TEACHER

Murder Confession is Read at His Trial.

Herkimer, N. Y., May 15.—A written confession alleged to have been made by Jean Glanin, telling in detail how he murdered his young school teacher, Lida Beecher, was introduced at Glanin's trial by the prosecution. It was as follows:
"I went to school to Lida Beecher and had trouble with her and wanted to get revenge.
"I met her above the hotel and walked up the street with her up beyond the stone quarry. She had been a coming to see my folks about school and was coming up to see them last night and I told her they lived up the hill. When we got up there on the left side of the road I hit her with a monkey wrench that I got out of my father's barn. I had the wrench in my pocket when I went up.
"After I had hit her about three times with the wrench I hit her with a knife several times to be sure to finish her, and then I took her over in the lot. I dragged her by the foot. Then I went home and got there about 7.30.
"Sheriff Stitt and Deputy Sheriff Wilson testified that Glanin had also confessed to them. They gave the story of the murder substantially as told above.

Indict Duryea For Murder.
New York, May 15.—Chester B. Duryea, who shot and killed his father, General Hiram Duryea, on May 5, was indicted for murder in the first degree. He did not appear in court, however, as his condition did not warrant his leaving the hospital, where for days he was violent. The district attorney moved that two physicians be appointed to examine into Duryea's sanity.

SLUSH FUND IN NEW HAVEN DEAL

Mellen Admits Giving Stock to New York Officials.

MAY CALL ALDERMEN

Former President of Road Tells About the Acquisition of Other Lines.

Washington, May 15.—That the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad gave due bills for stock to mysterious persons who were directed to place them in the hands of New York city officials to obtain changes in the franchise of the New York, Boston & West Chester railroad, an electric line, was one of the principal revelations made by Charles S. Mellen, former president of the New Haven, while on the witness stand in the interstate commerce commission's inquiry.

Mr. Mellen, who was called as a witness despite the protest of Attorney General McKim, who says that he fears such action may make him immune from criminal prosecution in case such action is considered necessary, told with frankness of the negotiations with former Police Inspector Thomas F. Byrnes, of New York, and other officials in pulling through the trolley deal. He dealt with Mr. Byrnes, he said, because he had influence with persons whom "it was necessary to reach."

"I would have dealt with the devil if it had been necessary," the witness added.
The due bills were given, Mr. Mellen explained, when he was in New York and had no ready cash or stock with him. Many of these due bills, about $50,000 worth, were still outstanding, he said, though a number had been presented for payment since he retired. When asked by former Governor Folk, counsel for the commission, as to who held the bills, Mr. Mellen replied: "God only knows. They have been outstanding now five years, and my only hope is that I will not have to pay them all."

"These due bills constituted a sort of slush fund," said Mr. Folk after the hearing, "with which it was hoped to corrupt New York city aldermen, judges and police officials. The New Haven wanted thirteen changes made in the West Chester franchise before taking over the road, and it took this means to get them made. I have evidence to prove that the changes were positively arranged for and that even certain judicial decisions to remove obstacles in the pathway of the changes were all arranged for in advance."

"The cashing in of the due bills would naturally be done by go-betweens in order that the trail of the New Haven stock might be entirely obscured. Now the present holders of these due bills for New Haven stock to the value of $50,000, which Mr. Mellen testified are still outstanding, are afraid to present them for fear they will be asked where they came from, how they obtained them, who they are being cashed for and all that. It seems a shame, for the due bills are as good as gold. When they are presented Mr. Mellen must turn over the stock, if he has to go into the open market to obtain it."

As a number of papers and documents called for in a new subpoena served upon Mr. Mellen at his own request were not in Washington an adjournment was taken until Tuesday to enable Mr. Mellen to obtain them. Mr. Folk strongly intimated that every man who was a member of the board of aldermen in New York at the time the electric line deal was made will be summoned as witnesses before the commission.

VILLA HAS A MODEST SCHEME

Asks "Just Enough Ammunition to Fight Way Into Mexico City."
Paredon, Coahuila, Mex., May 15.—A jubilant over the prospects of an early campaign against Mexico City, Francisco Villa has suggested a novel scheme to induce the United States to permit him to import enough arms and ammunition to drive Huerta from the capital.
"Let President Wilson appoint a military commission to judge how much ammunition we would need to fight our way to Mexico City," Villa said. "Then the Americans could allow that much and no more to come in."

As money increases the love of it increases.—German Proverb.

Woman's World

Miss Mabel Boardman and the Red Cross Work.

MISS MABEL BOARDMAN.

One of the most interesting women in the United States at this time is Miss Mabel Boardman of Washington, society woman and philanthropist, whose position as chairman of the executive committee of the Red Cross society makes her practically head of that organization.

No sooner did the trouble with Mexico assume alarming proportions than Miss Boardman called a meeting in Washington, which was attended by representatives of the Red Cross society, various patriotic organizations and women's clubs, all anxious to cooperate in the work.

Miss Boardman and her associates told what the society was prepared to do in case of war.
For volunteer nurses there was no need, since Miss Jane Delano, head of the American Society of Red Cross Nurses, had ready for active service 5,000 experienced trained nurses. In fact, all that was needed was funds and supplies to carry on the work should there be need of them. An emergency committee with Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, wife of the president, as honorary chairman was appointed.

BAKING DISHES.

They May Be Adorned With Hand-some Hand Embroidered Bands.

Baking dish bands offer opportunities for the needlewoman to make a gift that would certainly be acceptable to the busy housewife who loves dainty table accessories.
These bands are made to fit around the baking dishes and are fastened with linen or crocheted buttons and loops. They are perfectly straight and either scalloped or hemstitched along the edges.
The hemstitched ones are usually made of homespun linen decorated with cross stitch in some quaint design with colors which harmonize with the dishes. A little blue tie pattern, seen the other day on one of these bands was done in two shades of green and was very effective.
The scalloped bands may have as the only decoration a monogram of three letters. The scallops and monograms could be embroidered in colors or all white, whichever was preferred.
These embroidered bands present a more elegant appearance than if a folded napkin were wrapped around the dish.

These embroidered bands present a more elegant appearance than if a folded napkin were wrapped around the dish.

SUMMER BLOUSES.

Dressy Models Carried Out in Transparent Materials.

Fashion has never been more seductive in the matter of blouses. In the homes, at luncheons, at tea, at bridge, the modern blouse plays a great part. It is transparent. Made in lace, in tulle, in a thin crepe de chine, the charm of the blouse consists in its being void of lining.
Not only is the neck exposed, but even the shoulders and arms are seen dimly through the thin silks, laces or nets. The blouse then comes directly upon the neck and arms without an intervening fabric of batiste or cambric or the band of ribbon, once so fashionable.
A woman well gowned recently observed at a smart afternoon bridge were a pale yellow blouse in a kind of spongy crepe de chine, semi-transparent, opening low at the neck, clinging to the firm, white shoulders and loose about the body.

Householders Must Keep Cats.
In Hong-Kong the law is that every house must have at least one cat.

Good form

Intrusive People.

From a spirit of idle curiosity there are many who, perhaps unconsciously, intrude without scruple where they are not wanted. To show such by a distant manner that they are intruding might be considered a breach of politeness, so too often they are endured with as much patience as possible.

As an example, in public eating rooms a party has secured a table or two as retired as possible, are entirely interested in themselves, and the affair may be intended to be as private as it can be made under such circumstances. Those who enter and pass the party to reach other tables should, in order to be considered entirely correct in deportment, neither call attention in any way, look too intently nor show any interest whatsoever in the presence of what is evidently an entirely private affair.

Yet how often may it be noted that an opposite course obtains. Newcomers deliberately look, most likely of course audibly, make no effort to avoid being intrusive, but the contrary. This may be called the epitome of bad manners, impertinence, lack of politeness and also showing an excess of curiosity, in itself the height of ill breeding.

Oriental Favors.

A few of the really useful favors which may be provided for a small party are well worth considering.

For the girls there are the daintiest possible cardcases of pasteboard covered with pale toned Japanese crepe and decorated with a hand painted flower design that cost very little, whether made at home or made to order.

Then there are the workbags in Bulgarian colors that can be made of the blue and red wide ribbons which have recently gone out of fashion for sashes and girdles, but which are the prettiest materials imaginable for "fancy" things.

Any girl will gladly welcome a favor in the shape of a narrow stemmed, tall Chinese vase in blue and white or blue, red, green and black, for it makes an ideal receptacle for hatpins when not needed for the single fresh flower which should be on every daintily equipped dressing table.

It is also a good idea to give single tea-cups and saucers in oriental ware, because nearly every girl is now collecting a harem of sets.

A Doll Party.

A little girl who dearly loved her doll conceived the happy idea of giving dolly a birthday party. No sooner thought of than the little girl and her mother put the thought into execution, with the result that seven girls received invitations to bring their favorite dolls to the birthday party.

The hours were from 3 to 5, and it was indeed a pretty sight when the dolls and their mothers assembled around the daintily decorated table. Doll dishes were used, and the small table was set entirely with miniature articles, and the gifts brought the birthday doll were most fascinating, for everything that grown people have is now made for dolls.

There were wee cakes with tiny plait tapers, which were lit, and the little mothers were just as grownup as possible and looked after their respective children with true motherly solicitude. At a large table the real children had their repast, and some of them ate the dolls' portions also.

High Teas.

High tea may be defined as a small, formal, early supper, after which the guests are expected to stay for the evening. It differs from a dinner party chiefly in the absence of the roast and vegetables. The principal dish is usually an entree, say chicken patties. Otherwise it may be as formal as a dinner and served in courses, beginning with bonillon and ending with the demitasse, or it may be the old fashioned tea, hot biscuits and honey, cold sliced chicken, preserves and cake.

Housewife's Sets.

Several sets of matching caps and aprons are a positive necessity to the young housekeeper who does her own cooking and answers her own doorbell. The cap looks best when made in Dutch style with wings above the ears, as that sort perfectly protects the most elaborate of coiffures and bears not the faintest resemblance to the conventional household headgear. But, of course, the main thing is to adopt the style of cap which best becomes the individual young housewife.

Value of Rheuma From the Court

Judge Barhorst was Relieved of Rheumatism After Doctors Failed.

If you have tried many other remedies and doctors' treatments for Rheumatism and found they failed, do not be skeptical about trying RHEUMA. Read the testimony of Judge John Barhorst of Fort Loraine, O.:
"After treatment by three doctors without result, I have been cured of a very bad case of RHEUMATISM by using two bottles of RHEUMA. It is now two years since I used the remedy, and I am still as well as ever. Previously, I was a cripple, wailing with crutches."

Such testimony should be convincing. 50 cents of People's Drug Store guaranteed.

A Medieval Ghost Story

By F. A. MITCHEL

There is a story concerning one of the De' Medicis, a powerful Florentine family, which, if not true, at least accords well with medieval times. This man—I think he was Cosmo de' Medici, first Duke of Tuscany—was as near satanic as it is possible for a man to be. One of his sons while hunting in a quarrel wounded his brother, and Cosmo killed the offending boy with his own sword. The duke's daughter fell in love, and her father, who claimed the right to dispose of her hand, slew her also. His wife did not long survive these tragedies, and Cosmo gave himself up to so fiendish a career for the rest of his natural life that he shocked even his contemporaries. The above statements are historical. The story is as follows:

There stood in the environs of Florence during the seventeenth century, near the spot where Duke Cosmo killed his son, a villa which in his time had been a hunting lodge. It is well known that the duke's conscience tortured him, and it is supposed that his profligate life after his wife's death was to drown his voice. The hunting lodge, where it was supposed he was staying when he killed his son, after his demise was for many years unoccupied. The story goes that in the duke's will that clause which referred to the lodge read, "The lodge where I sojourned when I found it necessary to maintain my authority as head of the house of De' Medici by punishing my son I bequeath to the devil."

No one could be found who was willing to buy the place under such a title, and for years after its owner passed away so great was the horror of his memory that no one would rent it. At last, however, an Italian gentleman, Signor Cavalli, bought it for a song and converted it into a villa. He was a young man just married to a young and beautiful wife.

One evening shortly before dinner—it was during the gloaming, before candles were lighted—Signor Cavalli was in the library trying to read in the dusk. Signora was in her room, directly above, making her toilet. Suddenly the husband heard a thump directly over his head as of a body falling on the floor. He ran upstairs, and there lay his wife inanimate before her dresser. He took her up, carried her to a lounge, placed her on it and sprinkled water on her face. Thus revived, she looked at him with an expression of horror.

"What is it, carissima?" he asked. She closed her lids as if to shut out some horrid picture, then opened them and said:

"The duke?"
"What duke?"
"Cosmo, Cosmo and the devil—one or both. The features were those I have seen in portraits of the first Duke of Tuscany, but they were also those of the devil. They looked at me from the mirror."

"Some one must have come upon you to frighten you."

"That awful face did not belong to any human being. It was dead Cosmo turned Lucifer."
The wife clung to her husband during the rest of the evening and passed the night with him in a chamber at the other end of the villa. The next morning she begged him to take her away from the place, and he was obliged to do so, though he returned the same afternoon. He clung to the idea that some one had purposely frightened his wife and for a motive. He knew that certain persons, Duke Cosmo's heirs, were interested in getting possession of the property, and he believed they were taking advantage of the clause in the will respecting it to frighten away any one who should buy it, hoping to secure it for a nominal price.

Cavalli slept on the night of his return in the room where his wife had been so terribly frightened. If any one could scare him out of the house he had bought he was welcome to do so. He was indignant at the outrage that had been practiced upon him and placed under his pillow a rapier and a pistol with which to take care of any one attempting to disturb him. He went to sleep with his hand on the pistol.

Nothing unusual occurred during the night. He slept in the room several nights and before going to sleep for the last of them resolved that on the morrow he would go to Florence and endeavor to persuade his wife to return with him. He was awakened at midnight by seeing a light shining through the bed curtains. Pulling them aside, he saw two young persons, a boy and a girl, each holding a candle, walking slowly across the room. In the boy's side was a gaping wound; in the girl's breast was another.

Strangely enough Cavalli did not feel frightened, though he was appalled. But in another moment another figure appeared behind the two, which froze the very marrow in his bones. A man whom he recognized as the same one his wife had described as having seen in her mirror walked behind the two young persons. This little procession passed to the wall, apparently walking into it as persons walking down into water disappear beneath the surface.

As soon as they had gone Signor Cavalli sprang from his bed and, rushing from the room, went down the staircase into the library below, where he spent the remainder of the night piling wood on embers he found on the hearth. In the morning he left the place and rejoined his wife in Florence.

Preaching service at 7:30 p. m. with sermon by T. R. Jeffery, of Carlisle, whose first appearance here should attract a large congregation.

Brief Idleness Recommended.

The power of work which makes many a successful man what he is must often be placed to the credit, not to his hours of industry, but to that of his hours of idleness in boyhood. Even the hardest worker of us all, if he has to deal with anything above mere details, will do well, now and again, to let his brain lie fallow for a space. The next crop of thought will certainly be all the fuller in the ear and the weeds fewer.—T. H. Huxley.

Catarrh Victims

Use Hyomei—You Breathe It

It's the right-to-the-point remedy not only for catarrh, but for head colds, sniffles, bronchitis, laryngitis or croup of children. You breathe it—no stomach dosing. You will like Hyomei. It not only gives instant and lasting relief, but is entirely harmless, pleasant to use, and economical. Money refunded by People's Drug Store if you are not benefited.

Hyomei is a combination of antiseptic oils that mixes with the air and quickly reaches the irritated and inflamed membrane of the nose. It's sure and safe healing begins immediately—you feel better at once. If suffering from watery eyes, husky voice, discharge from the nose, or that choked-up feeling, try Hyomei now—to-day. All druggists sell it. Ask for the complete outfit.—$1.00 size.

These Corn Planters

Superior-- The one check row Corn Planter in the world that will drop the grains either flat or edge ways. We give you the attachment with each machine that will do the work either way you want it. Plenty of other machines will drop the grain either one of the two ways but there is no other single machine that drops them both ways.

Hench & Drumgold-- You all know this famous brand of single row Corn Planter; know that they are made right and will stand the service.

These are the ones we sell. Come in to see them.
